

„Carol I” National Defence University takes part on 26 – 30 January in Southampton, Great Britain at the 5th Annual E-Learning Symposium.

The event is organized by the Centre for Foreign Languages, Linguistics and Connected Studies of the University of Southampton in cooperation with Joint Informational Systems Committee and constitutes the proper environment to discuss new ways to implement new educational resources in higher education, accessible online and used on a large scale by both students and teachers. „Carol I” National Defence University will be represented in the activity by university reader Maria-Magdalena Popescu PhD.

Due to the knowledge accumulated during the development of the first English Language Course in electronic format organized by the Romanian Armed Forces, the representative of our institution will address a number of issues related to online courses.

The event is also an opportunity for an experience exchange meant to contribute to the efficient development of educational content and to facilitate the access of Romanian military personnel to an ever increasing number of online training courses.